

ROB BROADFIELD'S

INSIDE COVER with Daniel Hatch

Phone: 9482 3111 email: inside.cover@wanews.com.au

DONNA IN THE CAR

Providing stark contrast to the mercy mission of Minister Jacobs was his Cabinet colleague, Environment Minister Donna Faragher.

The minister was deep in the Kalbarri National Park on Tuesday night to release 50 Tamar wallabies into the wild when her four-wheel-drive became bogged in sand.

With the entire Geraldton press pack there to bear witness to the event, the minister sat in the vehicle while her advisers and Department of Environment officials tried to extract it.

IC's spy told us the minister actually got out to see if she could help, but got back in again.

Ultimately the blokes let down the tyres to gain some traction and began pushing.

IC: So was she sitting in the vehicle while they pushed it?

Spy: Yes, she was.

IC: What a princess!

IC was horrified.

Who doesn't get out and push? You can bet your bottom dollar Alannah MacTiernan would have rolled up her sleeves.

Take your Jimmy Choos off and push.

We put the allegations to the minister, who was quick to point out that Liberal Agricultural region MP Brian Ellis was there in the thick of it, helping get the car out.

"I went to help but the boys had it under control — clearly chivalry is not dead," she told IC.

No, but clearly feminism is.

Bogged: Donna Faragher inspects her 4WD before hopping back in.